Deer Dancer

Two-channel film & sound installation, 9 mins 24 sec (looped), 2019
Costumes, various materials, 2019
Print works series, blind deboss and emboss with gold foil, 111 x 77.5cm, 2019

Deer Dancer is a cross-artform project investigating deer mimesis, specifically, representations within dance from across cultures. The work examines how the imitation of deer behaviour constructs 'wilderness' as the site for the cultivation of hetero-masculinity and how hunting mythologies shape and impact real ecologies. Premiering at Edinburgh Art Festival 2019, Deer Dancer was presented as a two-channel film and sound installation featuring music and costumed choreography, alongside the costumes and series of visual score print works.

The project grew out of research into three traditional dances, their ecological roots and associated mytho-poetic and cultural contexts: the Deer Dance of the indigenous Yaqui of Sonora, Mexico, and their Pascua Yaqui descendants in Arizona, USA; the Highland Fling of the Scottish Highlands; and the Abbots Bromley Horn Dance of Staffordshire, England. This was further informed by experiential research into hunting practices – deer stalking and animal tracking – and by direct observation of deer in their habitat. Additionally, the archaeological discovery at Star Carr – a Mesolithic site in North Yorkshire – of a number of red deer frontlets worn as ritual headdresses, offers an interesting prehistoric parallel to these dances practiced today. As traces of hunting rites, how are these dances to be understood within a contemporary context? How does the mimesis of male deer behaviours, from the capering fawn, to the bravado, display and aggression of the rutting stag, inform a 'performance' of masculinity by male dancers? What are the implications of these gendered performances in society today?

Exploring the tacit and cultural knowledge embodied in the three dances, Tuulikki created a suite of visual scores, tracking the steps of the dancers, replacing human footprints with deer hoofprints: red deer for the Highland Fling steps, white-tailed deer for the Yaqui Deer Dance steps, and reindeer for the Abbots Bromley Horn Dance. This blend of dance notation with animal tracks forms the basis of a choreography that features within her film, delineated in gold foil on the visual scores. At the heart of this are five hybrid stag-men characters, each performed by Tuulikki: the Monarch, Warrior, Young Buck, Fool and Old Sage.
Crosscutting between two screens, intricate costumes and props appear piece by piece on Tuulikki's body, in a queer assemblage, challenging human:animal and male:female binaries. Soundtracked by a multi-layered vocal composition, she utilises technology to extend her vocal range into 'male' and 'stag' pitches. We then encounter the five characters in an imaginary wilderness world: the Monarch asserts his dominance, bellowing and displaying his sixteen-tine crown; the Warrior, highly alert, tracks and hunts, defending himself on attack with antlered spears; the Young Buck, lustful, cocksure and trigger-happy, challenges anyone in his close proximity; the conflicted Fool wrestles with his hobby stag, which appears to push and pull him into battle; and the Old Sage, spirit of the wild hart and ghost of a man, tends the land with hooves and hands. One by one they take a bow and the deer dance commences. With movements that signify both the deer rut and a pre-hunt ritual, the characters face one another, performing their dance, drawing their weapons. In a perpetual loop of learned behaviour and appropriation, the stag-men are condemned to self-destruct. Exploring the interconnections between the crisis of ecology and the crisis of masculinity, Deer Dancer is an explicit contemporary life-crisis ritual for a damaged planet.

Link to film (one screen version): https://vimeo.com/345922486 (Password: deer)

"...a thought-provoking study of how ritual can reinforce culture." Frieze magazine, Seven Highlights from Edinburgh Art Festival

"There's something undeniably amusing about a tiny woman posturing in various mad fake beards and codpieces... it highlights the absurd weight we give to ideas of maleness. Tuulikki takes this stuff seriously for sure, but there’s always an undercurrent of elegant wit that stops her work short of being po-faced."

* Nancy Durrant, The Times

"The best video and sound stuff at this year’s festival is at the new Edinburgh Printmakers. ‘Deer Dancer’ is a perfectly pitched work by Hanna Tuulikki, shown... on two opposing screens and set to a bewitching and acutely atavistic sound track... the artist, in a succession of fabulous costumes, plays multiple deer-inflected roles, dancing out a perfectly choreographed, rhythmic tale of hunt and kill... This is a confident, elegantly produced and richly layered work that translates something elemental about nature and ritual."

Claudia Massie, The Spectato
DEER DANCER

Exhibition history:
2019  Hanna Tuulikki: Deer Dancer, Edinburgh Printmakers

Credits:
Performed & directed by Hanna Tuulikki
Character development and choreography by Will Dickie, Peter McMaster and Hanna Tuulikki
Dramaturgy by Peter McMaster
Movement direction by Will Dickie
Sound composed and recorded by Hanna Tuulikki
Sound mixed with Pete Smith
Director of photography by Andrew Begg
Edited by Laura Carreira
On set wardrobe management by Lydia Honeybone
Production management by Amy Porteous
Costumes and print works by Hanna Tuulikki
Costume fabrication assistance by Lydia Honeybone

Developed through conversations and interviews with tradition bearers and academics, including Felipe Molina (Yaqui tradition bearer and translator), Larry Evers (American Indian Studies, The University of Arizona), Jack Brown (Abbots Bromley Horn Dance tradition bearer and historian), Doug and Joyce Gilbert (Trees for Life); by observing a number of dances and participating in rituals, including the Yaqui Deer Dance (Pascua Yaqui Easter ceremonies, Old Pascua, Tucson, Arizona, March 2018), Abbots Bromley Horn Dance (Abbots Bromley, September 2017 and September 2018); and direct learning with Sandra Robertson (Highland Fling), Indalecio 'Carlos' Moreno Matuz (Yaqui Deer Dance), Gary Faulkenberry (animal tracking, March, July 2018), Allan Common (deer stalking at Trees for Life,

Commissioned by Edinburgh Printmakers, funded by Creative Scotland. Research and development supported by Magnetic North Artist’s Attachment, funded by the Jerwood Charitable Foundation and Creative Scotland. Additional support from Hope Scott Trust, The Work Room, University of Arizona Poetry Center, Trees for Life, Bothy Project, University of Glasgow, Glasgow School of Art, and CCA: Centre for Contemporary Arts, Glasgow.